Notes

- The website of the Federal Ministry is intended to provide information on areas of responsibility of the ministry that are of interest to a broader public. However, it is not intended to provide legal advice; an expert should always be consulted for this purpose.
- Errors may occur due to the digitization of data. When using different browsers and due to different software settings, deviations in the presentation of data cannot be ruled out.
- The website of the Ministry of Social Affairs largely complies with the "Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.1" of the W3C, level AA. In some cases, some points have also been taken over from level AAA.
- The Ministry of Social Affairs strives to make its information materials, publications and the like as accessible as possible. Therefore, since January 1, 2016, all newly created PDF documents on the website have been published in the PDF standard PDF/UA to meet the requirements of the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.1. For documents published before this period, we cannot guarantee compliance with this standard in its entirety. However, if you need a document that is not currently offered in an accessible version, we will be happy to provide it with the appropriate post-processing upon request.
